British Easter Traditions

In the UK, Easter is now one of the major Christian festivals of the year with many customs and traditional food. It is, however, believed that Easter originates from the ancient Anglo-Saxon goddess of the dawn and spring – Eostre.

In Britain, Easter occurs at a different time each year – it is determined by the first full moon following the first day of spring in the northern hemisphere – meaning it can occur on any Sunday between 22nd March and 25th April. It is the end of winter but also the end of Lent (a time of fasting in the Christian calendar) so is often a fun celebration.

On the Thursday before Easter Sunday (known as Maundy Thursday), The Queen takes part in the Ceremony of the Royal Maundy. This involves the distribution of Maundy money (small silver coins) to elderly people who have done something deserving.

Over Easter, schools in the UK close for two weeks and the Friday before Easter Sunday and the Monday after are a bank holiday. Many Christians attend church at this time or other events where they might see a variety of traditional activities, such as:

Morris Dancing

This is a traditional dance that probably dates back to at least the 1400s. Usually men (although in modern times, women too) dance to music in a rhythmic way, wearing bells on their legs and often waving handkerchiefs or hitting sticks together.

Egg Rolling

Eggs are a symbol of new life so have been associated with spring and Easter for a long time. In many towns and villages across the UK, it is possible to attend egg rolling competitions over the Easter weekend. It is thought to symbolise the rolling away of the stone from Jesus' tomb before his resurrection.
